Vik Muniz
Double Mona Lisa (Peanut Butter and Jelly) (After Warhol), 1999
Cibachrome print
Courtesy Sikkema Jenkins & Co., New York

Peanut butter and jam, chocolate, sugar, wire, dirt and diamonds are just a few of the astonishing range of materials used by this artist to make images that he then preserves through photographs. Since the early 1990s, Brazilian artist Vik Muniz has earned an international reputation for the photographic pieces he creates out of everyday materials. These images, inspired by current events, art history or famous figures, are familiar yet enigmatic.

An exhibition organized by the Miami Art Museum, Miami, Florida, with support from the Miami Art Museum's Annual Exhibition Fund and additional support provided by Duggal Visual Solutions.
